

The College of Physicians of Philadelphia

SECTION ON MEDICINE AND THE ARTS

presents

Their Bodies: Ourselves

A Town Hall style discussion of BODY WORLDS

On view at the Franklin Institute from October 7, 2005 to April 23, 2006, BODY WORLDS (www.bodyworlds.com) is an anatomical exhibit of more than 200 human specimens including embryos, transparent body slices and entire bodies that have been preserved through a process of plastination. Many figures in the collection are presented in action poses – jumping, cycling, playing chess. This discussion of the exhibit will explore questions such as the following: Is this science? Is this art? Is this educational? Is this sensational? What does the exhibit say about the spiritual nature of humankind?

Moderator: Dr. Happy Craven Fernandez
President, Moore College of Art and Design

Panelists: Paul Root Wolpe, PhD
Professor of Psychiatry, Medical Ethics, and Sociology; Senior Fellow, Center for Bioethics University of Pennsylvania

Dennis De Pace, PhD
Associate Professor, Neurobiology and Anatomy; Anatomy Course Director Drexel University College of Medicine

Thomas Fekete, MD
Fellow, College of Physicians of Philadelphia Professor of Medicine Temple University School of Medicine

Arlene Love, BFA, BSEd
Sculptor; Multi-media Artist; Photographer

Thursday, December 1, 2005
6:00 - 7:30 p.m.

The College of Physicians of Philadelphia
19 South 22nd Street, Philadelphia

Join us for wine and cheese following the program.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

RSVP to Nava Hall: (215) 563-3737 ext. 285
or email: nhall@collphyphil.org

Questions? Contact Andrea Kenyon: (215) 563-3737 ext. 237 or email: kenyon@collphyphil.org

This program is made possible in part by generous grants from the Horace W. Goldsmith and Arcadia Foundations.

